FOREWORD

We, the students, make up the yearly kaleidoscope of our campus. Within these pages we may find a record of our fulfilled and unfulfilled dreams. Let us look for those precious memories of many new acquaintances and a few choice friendships, of daily assignments faithfully and regularly done, of freedom gained through education, and of the birth of new understanding and finer appreciations. This is our expression, our individuality, our unity, our year, 1963. : : : : : : : :

MRS. MARGARET GLENN

Dedication

¶ Six years ago, we entered a classroom and began learning the instruments of the orchestra. That was our introduction to three years of music and culture. Soon we learned that this little lady with the sparkling blue eyes would be more than a teacher. She became our companion, and she brought music and refinement to all of us. Her personality and perseverance have graced important school affairs, as well as informal piano sessions after class. So we, the class of 1963, dedicate this Kaleidoscope to you, Mrs. Glenn, who for years have given unselfishly of yourself and of your time to bring joy to others. : : : : :

Alma Mater

Here's to the ring we wear for her.

Here's to the black and blue.

Here's to the hope that we still may be

Proven through every test,

Worthy the school the most revere.

Here's to the G. P. S.!

Faculty and

"The Faculty of the Girls Preparatory School represents not only scholarship but also personal interest in each girl. Contrary to general opinion, a teacher's influence does not end at graduation but continues throughout our lives to inspire us in other aspects of life as well as in our search for knowledge. :

Class History

Of struggles and striving we sing—
Of lofty ideals and majestic goals—
Attained through years of mighty endeavor.

Six years ago—after the conquering and destruction of the fortress of Grammar School, we, the brave heroes of 1963, embarked upon the Sea of Adolescence, perilous waters filled with many monsters and fraught with manifold dangers.

BOOK I

We set forth in our good ship GPS 63 — all seventy-eight of us,* full of foreboding and inner trepidation. Soon we encountered the first of the perils, Rat Week. For three days of battle, we contended with those monsters, Seniors, ten feet tall, with hearts of stone and minds of ingenious cruelty, not to speak of the voices of clarions. On the third day, a truce was declared, following the battle of the Roller Rink, the Seniors were quite ready to cease hostilities. Tara, one of our most courageous heroes, was acclaimed for her endurance and fortitude during this encounter.

Guided by our trusted helmsman, Mrs. Armstrong, who piloted our vessel through the shoals of tests and homework and safely by the treacherous reefs of lost books and confused schedules, and aided by our elected leaders Nancy C., Anne M., and Susan B., who began the log of our voyage from which this history is taken, and directed by Judy R. and Toni, who helped keep us on the right course, we bypassed many perils and avoided much danger. Betsy C. and Leanne were in charge of our games, while Brenton became our Welfare lookout.

On two different occasions we landed—once on the stage and once on the gym floor—and celebrated with games. On stage we presented "Red Shoes at Plymouth Rock," and six months later, we again rested and marked the occasion with games. This time they were in the form of folk-dances. Some of our most coordinated comrades were selected to attend the queen whom we had elected. These fortunate ones were Sidney, Lyn, Carol F., Joyce, and Francie M. Because of some failure in predicting the correct omens, the gods were offended and showed their displeasure by sending storms upon us. We, therefore, returned to an indoor amphitheatre and continued the celebrations with undampened spirits. Soon afterwards we again set sail and, after meeting and overcoming the monsters of Final Exams, we sailed into a quiet harbor, where we decided to rest and repair our ship.

BOOK II

After three months of rest, we resumed our journey. Jane B., Carla, and Judy W. had been washed overboard by the storms of the preceding year, but we had found five new companions—Karen Standefer, Corinne, Pam, Anne F., and Nancy B. Our pilot, Mrs. Williams, was assisted by Susu, Lyn, Annie K., and Diann E., who was keeper of the log. These brave heroes endeavored to steer us past the hidden rocks of eighth-grade "maturity," while Susan B. and Elder tried to rescue us from the seemingly irresistible Siren Song of Friday Study Hall. Our athletic endeavors were organized by Lauren and Brenton, and Carol Dickson directed our contributions toward Welfare.

We dropped anchor at an island where some of our companions took part in a swimming contest. Later we traveled inland to visit treasure vaults, huge steel caverns, and we wondered at the riches they contained. Here some of our dramatically inclined comrades entertained us with "Introducing Mopsy." After a year and one-half of our perilous journey, some of the bravest heroes were honored by being selected for a special group, the Service League. It was during this first part of our journey that we encountered two other groups of sailors, both entirely male, hostile to each other, yet friendly to us. Soon we discovered diplomacy was quite necessary in maintaining friendly relations with both groups.

Next we encountered the treacherous winds of "Evangeline," accompanied by the pelting rain of obscure quotations, the hail of similes and metaphors, and the sleet of scansion, meter and rhyme. After passing through such storms, we were glad to anchor and celebrate our May Games. This year in our dances we portrayed farmers, stars and some fantastic creatures known as lemon drops. Once more taking up our journey, we escaped the quicksand of Failure, the marsh of Spring Fever, and thus nearing the end of our second year, sought a harbor where we might prepare for the coming year.

BOOK III

Following the celebration of swimming games in honor of Neptune, we set out on the third year of our perilous trek. Sharon B., Nancy Jane, Helen S., Diane S., and Betty Y. were lost during the storms of the previous summer, but we had gained Beverly, Helen M., and Hisc. Our ship was piloted by Mrs. Poston with assistance from Lauren, Mary, Judy, and Ella, keeper of the log. Betsy and Karen Standefer acted as navigators while Nancy C. took care of our Welfare. Again some of our heroic comrades were honored by the Service League, and some of our scholars became members of the Library Club, led by Frances.

We made a landing and celebrated with a dramatic production, "Accent on Revenge." Here some of our most athletic crew members, this year led by Annie K. and Donna Sue, distinguished themselves in games of basketball played against other crews. While exploring this country, we met a band of unusual characters led by a young man named Ivanhoe. In his band were, among others, a witch named Ulrica, a knight, Brian du Bois-Guilbert, and two young girls, Rebecca and Rowena. After suspicious questioning we made friends and listened to the tale of their adventures. Setting sail again, we were drawn toward the treacherously charming maelstrom of society, but escaping the worst of its whirlpools, we succumbed enough to visit the land of Dogpatch, where we celebrated in dancing. Soon after resumiing the journey, we ran into great ice storms; our ship was paralyzed for several days by the huge ice floes. Some of us sought warmer climes by heading south until the weather became milder, but others of us huddled together for warmth and remained near the ship. When at last the ice melted, we headed for land where we held our May Games in thanksgiving for our deliverance. This year we danced the stories of Robin Hood, Peter Pan, and Sleeping Beauty. A few days later, we took a short excursion north to a city where we viewed with awe the great temple to Athena, the great institute of learning named Vanderbilt and the home of one of the land's greatest heroes, a mansion called the Hermitage. Setting sail, we maneuvered our way through the last of the shoals of our "verdant" freshman year, and finding a resting place, landed to relax and fit ourselves for the coming year. As we landed, special honor was paid to our two bravest heroes, Lauren and Judy, as they each received a trophy for their meritorious service.

BOOK IV

During the summer we regained our companion Betty Y., as well as gaining Johanna H., but despite these gains, our crew numbered but seventy. Meg, Georgia Jane, Suzy Brooks, Nancy C., Jane C., Betsy D., Francie M., Mary Ann, Ginger, and Ann W. had joined other crews. With Miss Moore at the helm, and Elise, Babs, and Frances helping her, and with Annie K. keeping the log up-to-date, we expected clear sailing. Navigation was directed by Ella and Judy; welfare, by Susan B.; athletics, by Brenton and Mary. Others in our crews became members of the Service League, and some of our most coordinated heroes won laurels in tennis, basketball, swimming, and volleyball. Sidney won special honor for her grace and dancing skill when she was awarded membership in the society of Terpsichord.

On our first stop this year, we presented the last of our dramas, "Augie Evans: Private Eye." We found that we had landed in the fascinating land of Politics, and we all joined in the current campaign, praising the merits of J.F.K. or R.M.N. and discovering that political discussions are usually the fastest road to the land of the Hotheads. Having rescued several of our crew from this dangerous area, we resumed our voyage and ran headlong into the first of a family of monsters which pursued us throughout the remainder of our voyage. The beast was the NEDT, a species of examination of the genus of the National Testing program. All of us survived this encounter, and to recuperate from the strain we took "A Trip to Hawaii" where we relaxed with dancing. We rewarded ourselves for our outstanding achievements in the May Games—we correctly wound two of the three May Poles—with an excursion to the mountains in the east where we rode horses, rode up the mountains in an invention called the Sky-lift, and enjoyed the famed candy made in that region. Taking up our voyage, we soon reached the goal of our fourth year.

BOOK V

With renewed vigor we began the fifth year of our journey. Through various mishaps we had lost seven of our crew—Ariel, Johanna, Ella, Susan P., Linda L., Helen M., and Anne M. Miss Moyer was our helmsman, aided by Virginia, Nancy B. and Betsy, as Polly Ann, with the help of Lauren, Toni and their Static staff, recorded the events of our voyage. May was our Welfare lookout, while Susan B., Karen Standefer, and Annie K. kept our course straight toward our goal. Toni and Elise led us through the swampy bogs of Physical Unfitness, over the bridges of Jumping Ropes and the trail rocky with sit-ups, pull-ups, and burpees, until we all—in some way or another—reached the solid ground of Physical Fitness. Our most physically fit companions again won praise in our games, and our most coordinated dancers—Diann, Susu, Tricia T., Helen B., Leanne, Corinne, Pam, May, Brenton and Babs—were invited to join the band of Terpsichore. Some of our most erudite comrades were selected for the National Honor Society—Frances, Jackie, Judy, Lauren, Karen S., Elise and Elder.

We were beset by another beast of the NEDT family, the PSAT, but we discovered that this was merely an infant when its parents, the SApT and the SAcT, came to attack us also. Our shaken nerves almost caused the destruction of our ship, for we came perilously close to the rapids of Junior-Over-Jolliness and almost ran aground on the shoals of Low Citizenship and the treacherous reefs of Failure. At length the ensuing storms subsided, and we found haven "South of the Border" where we celebrated our escape with a dance. Suddenly, after the tempest-filled days of Semester Exams, we realized we were not far at all from our goal, and worked diligently to avoid anything which might further hinder us. Despite our efforts to escape, however, we were soon confronted by another monster, a relative of the PSAT. To defeat this beast, the NMSQT, required all our ability, and we were quite content to rest with our May Games. This year, as befitted our dignified state, we portrayed deities, of the underworld and of the heavens. Then we traveled south to the land of Tara, where we danced in the setting of "Gone With the Wind." As the year came to its close, Judy and Annie K. were awarded the Grace McCallie Scholarship and the Senior Scholarship respectively, in recognition of their invaluable service.

After our ship had landed to rest before we began the final stage of the journey, many of our crew members led by our helmsman, Miss Moyer, with Mrs. Moyer, Miss Moore and Mrs. Reed, ventured northward into the land of the strange monsters known as Yankees. There were many wondrous things to behold in this alien land. We toured the country's seat of government and a large metropolis where we attended several dramatic productions, visited the homes of famous patriots, and gazed upon the monuments to many national heroes. Having stared in amazement at the many wonders of this land, including large buildings in which the influence of ancient and contemporary cultures was illustrated, magnificent churches, and the other famous landmarks of the area, we returned to our ship with many tales of adventures among the Yankee monsters.

BOOK VI

With high spirits, we set sail on the final year of our great voyage. For the first weeks of the journey we trained a new crew of sailors who were about to begin their own perilous trek. We instructed them in the rules of the voyage while putting them through a rigorous survival training complete with camouflage and instruction in absolute obedience to their superiors. This year Mrs. Clark directed our course with navigational duties assigned to Lauren, assisted by Karen S., Judy, and Elder, and with assistant piloting done by Susan B., Betsy, Elise, and Toni—who completed our log. Frances was head historian, and, aided by her capable staff—Babs, Sidney, Nancy Kirk, Lyn, Jackie, Pam, Suzanne R., Ann L., Salibeth, Carol F., Shirley, Peggy, Bee and Virginia, she compiled a book presenting all the facets of this last year of our voyage.

Our games were led by Donna Sue and Annie K., and Tara and Joy led the less athletic of us in supporting our comrades who won honor in such games as basketball, led by Toni and Lauren; tennis, swimming, and volleyball, led by Annie K. Janet was selected to the band of Terpsichord, led by Tricia T., while Nancy Kirk, Toni, Susan B., Pam and Salibeth were chosen as members of the National Honor Society, headed by Jackie. The more musical of our crew were led by Robin in the Glee Club and Helen in Music Cub, as Laura directed the group interested in the arts of the theatre, and Betty, our religious discussions. Brenton and May were outstanding in their war for welfare which they waged against the monsters of Selfishness and Indifference.

As each of our crew was toiling up the solitary road of the Chapel Talk, she inevitably encountered one or more of the beasts we had met before—the AmCoT, the SApT or the SAChT. All of us escaped without much injury, and for their brave performances in these and other such battles, Frances, Elise, Karen S., Toni, Salibeth and Elder were named National Merit Finalists, and Lauren, Robin, Annie K. and Susan B. were commended for their heroism. After such struggles, we relaxed with a dance and paused to award honor to those most deserving heroes of the past years. Lauren was named "Most Outstanding"; Betsy, "Most Popular"; Frances, "Most Likely to Succeed"; Annie K., "Most Versatile"; Toni, "Cutest"; Rosalind, "Wittiest"; Susan B., "Most Congenial," and Robin, "Most Feminine." During the previous summer we had lost Katy and Susan L., and at the half-way point in this our last year, Leanne deserted us. At last rescuing the last of our crew from the whirlpool of College Decision, we sought a calm shore where we celebrated our May Games. Karen Standefer, assisted by Nancy B., Charlotte, Lricia T. and Judy, directed the planning and execution of the games, given in special honor of Diann, our May Queen, and Susan, our Maid of Honor. After dancing to a mysterious Eastern setting we set sail again, and without much further difficulty reached the long sought shores of Maturity where we bid farewell to our trusty ship, and each took his chosen path, thankful for his safe voyage and for the achievement of his hard-won goal.

Class Will

I, Jackie Adams, will my understanding of velocity and acceleration to the members of next year's physics class in hopes that they may be able to get one problem correct a night.

We, Donna Albright and Nancy Bird, will our smooth, slow driving to Ann Robinson, who we are sure will make use of it.

I, Helen Bryan, will to Peggy Rawlings my ability to walk the straight and narrow path.

I, Bee Bryan, will my constant chatter in class to Ann Baldwin, who is afraid to speak out.

I, Beverly Buckshorn, do will my natural (?) scientific ability in the chemistry lab to Alice Huskey, Dede Groves, and Trudy Moss in the hope that they don't break as much as I did.

I, Susan Butterfield, will my desire for getting a sun tan to anyone who is willing to swelter in the summer sun, to freeze to death in a reflector in the winter, and to use Man-Tan when the real thing isn't available.

I, Betsy Chisolm, will my habitual seat at Every Baylor athletic event even in the snow, fog, or hail to Eleanor McCallie, for I am quite sure that some day she's bound to turn traitor.

I, Virginia Cifers, will my fingernails to Debbie Hawkins in hopes that she can do better with them than I did.

I, Charlotte Clark, will my height to any junior who wants to spend her senior year looking up to the junior school girls.

I, Mary Day, will my ability to stay calm in all situations to Marsha Gerow who certainly won't inherit any stability from her sister.

We, Salibeth Dean and Sidney Easley, will to next year's chemistry classes, our monstrous sponge and the extra half-hours we always needed and never had, in the hope that they won't have to use their lunch periods for cleaning up their lab desks.

We, Carol Dickson, Toni Hill, and Gretchen Newell, will our nicknames "Bird," "Onion," and "Noodle," back to the garbage can in the cafeteria.

We, Evelyn Dowling and Vicky Nelson, will our ability to play golf and to snow Teddy Finley to Nancy Trotter, who can't seem to do either one.

I, Carolyn DuBose, will my grace and coordination to Terpsichord in hopes that the members can use them as examples of how not to be.

I, Diann Estabrook, will my naturally blonde hair to all those poor girls who are bottle blondes.

We, Anne Fields and Tricia Laws, will our ability to be good and stay out of trouble to our sisters, Katie and Mary, in hopes that they will make as many friends on the Student Council as we did.

I, Carol Fletcher, will my ability to spot cars in traffic to anyone who is as interested as I am.

I, Pam Gerow, being of extraordinarily sound mind, will my emotional stability and self-control to Patty Tessman in hopes that she will gain poise and not have so many fits.

I, Corinne Goree, will my peaceful senior year to next year's senior class—on the condition that they will share it with their teachers.

I, Rosalind Jacobs, will my ability to be "Ravishing" at all times to anybody who feels that she isn't quite ravishing enough.

I, Lyn Johnson, will my cool and limpid green eyes to Judy McCall in hopes that she can take compliments on hers with a straighter face than I can.

I, Shirley Jones, will my athletic prowess to my sister Barbara in hopes that she, too, will letter in every sport.

I, Nancy Kelly, will my athletic and dancing ability to Barbara Johnson, who seems in dire need of both.

We, Karin Smith and Janie Willingham, will our fun on the Junior trip to Julie Johnson who, we believe, has as much nerve as we did.

We, Nancy Kirk and Robin Young, having three sisters each, will to them our notes, books, and uniforms. We might as well. They were going to get them anyway.

I, Ann Kimball, will to my sister Karen my car to take care of. Even though she is too young to drive, she can at least keep my brothers (who are old enough) from tearing it apart.

I, Carol Landgrabe, will my peroxide bottles to Paula Whittle, who I don't think has ever heard of the stuff.

We, Ann Lewis and Suzanne Roberts, will our contacts and glasses to Mrs. Thomas in hopes that in the future years she will be able to differentiate between us.

I, Polly Ann Martin, will my multi-colored nail polish to Miss Myers' art classes in the hope that they will have as much fun experimenting with them as I have.

I, Margaret Ann McCallie, will our family car to my mother, who has been riding a bicycle since I was sixteen.

I, Nancy McClure, former "Student Teacher" of the democracy class, will my esteemed position to any of Miss Whitaker's students who are bold enough to take the consequences.

I, May Montague, will my "natural blonde" hair to all of the peroxide blondes in the hope that at next year's May Day practice, Mrs. Thomas will know the difference.

I, Alexis Moore, will my habit of procrastination to anyone who will take it; I have had it too long already.

I, Joy Osborne, am willing to will my will to whoever wishes a will.

I, Martie Phillips, will my superb equitation to Louise Newell, who does not know which side of a horse to mount.

I, Babs Pollard, will my inability to control my contagious laughter to next year's juniors in hopes that they will have as many disrupting sessions in history class as I have caused.

I, Judy Ryan, will my teddy bear to anyone who wants it as long as she sticks to stuffed animals.

We, Elise Rymer, Peggy Scoville, and Brenton Van Cleave, will our glamorous mid-week hair-dos to Ann Butterfield.

I, Lauren Shumacker, will to a new seventh grader my G.P.S. belt—which is the only thing I've kept up with for six years. I will turn it over to the incoming class as soon as I find the buckle.

We, Laura and SuSu Smartt, will to our sisters, Mary and Nancy, our ring-clacking bags for exclusive use in that certain class.

I, Karen Standefer, will to my rats, Gwin and Barrett, my ability to grin and bear it.

I, Janet Taylor, will my naturally curly hair to Harriett Smith whose hair is always beautifully straight and well behaved.

I, Tara Templeton, will my height to all the incoming seventh graders. I'm always mistaken for one anyway.

I, Trish Terry, will all my leftover bottles of Light 'n' Bright to Sharon Adamson so that she, too, may be a "true" blonde.

I, Joyce Thompson, will my shoes back to Clementine.

I, Betty (Wonder Woman) York, will my enormous height to the Baylor basketball team in hopes that they will stomp the Blues in years to come.

We, Elder (W.) Witt and Frances (Z.) Zwenig, will to all our teachers who seat us alphabetically our craned necks, our twisted spines, and our squinting eyes.

Class Prophecy

The rustling leaves of the trees divide
And reveal the oracle seated beside
A table laden with sacred scrolls
Of future events of young maidens foretold.
The yellowed parchment crinkles with age
As she scratches her quill cross the dusty page
Issuing forth from her omniscient mind
The prophecies of sixty girls unwind
The U.S. now uses the metric system because
Cabinet member Adams has changed the laws
Donna, the mathematician, has never been blue
Since the success of her book, 99 Ways to Argue.
Our Georgia Peach, Nancy, is often a wreck
Racing her taxi from here to Tech
Helen just married her fourth, a French duke;
She swears up and down that she'll last this one
"oot."

Bee's ability to have a language vocation
Has made her head interpreter at the United Nations.
Beverly, our Ipana toothpaste queen,
Has replaced Bucky Beaver on the TV screen.
Butter, who for years watched the heavens afar,
Has at last succeeded in catching a "star."
Betsy, the invincible coach, never yields
As she leads Chisolm's "Raiders" across the field.
A similarity with the old lady in the shoe,
Virginia has so many suitors, she doesn't know what to do.

Charlotte bravely rockets through space
Her astronaut suit is trimmed in black lace.
Mary's sharp wit has never slowed down;
She now heads a circus—their number one clown!
Sali, our scholar, painter, musician,
Has now reached the peak of intellectualism.
Bird now conducts her nightly session
On "How to Speak in 10 Easy Lessons."
Evelyn's made a million selling Siamese cats—
They talk and do tricks and are house trained at that

Carolyn's hair-dos are quite satisfactory
She's now the head of a teasing comb factory.
Sidney is famous in Russian ballet.
Kruschev likes her—she's in to stay.

Diann, our lovely May Day Queen,
Still graces the courts wherever she's seen.
Anne Fields has dyed her hair red and black
The problem is now how to dye it back.

Carol, a doctor and ever so smart,
Is also a talented dabbler in art.

Pam is quite an avid sports fan,
Now that she knows where the tackles stand.
With high boy-collared and flawless complexion
Corrinne's still the idol of feminine perfection.

Poor Toni with no co-ordination at all,
Plasters varsity letters all over her walls.
For witty Rosalind, life's never a bore;
If she can't raise the roof, she lowers the floor.

True love never came to captivate Lyn;
She's married instead to her very best "friend."
If you want to see Shirley, just turn on TV,
Now she puts on her acts for everyone to see.

A mother, a doctor, a learned preacher,
No, Nancy Kelly became a gym teacher.

Dating at McCallie was Ann K's biggest joy,
Now she's headmistress—they're all her boys.

Nancy's "A" courses in chemistry
Decided her major of pharmacy.

Bullwinkle Landgrebe is neither a swimmer nor diver.

Instead she's the world's fastest race car driver.

Tricia has settled for her Florida friend,
Although she's the love of millions of men.
Here's Ann Lewis—she's ventured far;
She's settled in London where the "Bobbies" are.
Nancy McClure, the new actress whiz, is
The most dramatic they know in all of show biz!
Polly Ann Martin, the nail polish queen,
Has invented a color that from the moon can be seen.

The years have passed—now May sports a new thing
Instead of a bracelet—a ten karat ring.

Alexis' nails are tough as a board,
She uses them for fencing instead of a sword.

Vicky now owns stock in a large corporation
She bought it by the yard for ground operation.

Gretchen, still as trim as can be,
Serves noodle soup instead of tea.

Joy says of her lovely coiffure,
"Only my hairdresser knows for sure."

Martie's leading a quiet, peaceful life,
Her giggles ran out and there's no love strife.

Spreading bliss to all the world,
Babs' laughing secret is now unfurled.

Suzanne runs a school for ducks and models
Teaching them how to improve their waddles.

Judy certainly collects many stores
For she's now surrounded by small "Teddy Bears"

Elise is now of "Rockette" fame;
Sudden developments were to blame.

Pixenish Peggy with Oriental foundation
Is still the epitome of procrastination.

Lauren, we hear, has been sent overseas
To try to establish eternal world peace.

Now we see Laura, who's still up a tree;
She owes it all to—gullibility???

Temple takes her money every week to the bank—
To establish little savings bonds for all her Hanks and Franks.

After winning the bathing suit contest with ease,
Susu is titled "Miss Universe Knees."

Lackadaisical Karin without a care,
Still has no gray in her coal-black hair.

Of Karen, the genius, the latest we've heard
She's got seven garages—for her Thunderbirds.

Janet's in business—most prices are fair
On pulling out kinks and straightening hair.

Tara, our cheerleader—no, can't be!
She's teaching the scholars democracy.

P.P.T., they used to stay;
Now her initials are P.T.A.

Joyce has made the greatest discovery in years
Invisible contacts—guaranteed, no tears.

Brenton, our psychoanalyst, has written a book
"How to Analyze People With an Insecure Look"

Though Janie has a beau in every port,
She now is modeling in ole New York.

Elder's naturally curly curls
Have now been inherited by her four little girls.

Betty York with her athletic team
Is the Boston Celtics' latest basketball queen.

Now Robin, our lady with the light flaxen hair,
Has hubby, a cottage, and babies to spare.

On Frances' decisions the whole nation waits
She's the first Woman President of the United States.

With this last good stroke of fortune we see
The oracle has finished her task of prophecy
Their futures are told—be they true, false or dim,
And we hope it will help you in remembering them.

A MORALITY

Throughout the world I see man's endless fight,
The struggle for his soul—the shifting plight
Of man's own love for man. Does brotherhood
Or hate control his heart? Does bad or good
Survive the fateful strife? Can man decide
If Conscience or the Temptor be his guide?
Should I in service give my life away
In aiding, serving others through the day,
Or find my joys in pleasing self alone
Indulging in the selfish joys I've known?

Bow, O Conscience, to the mighty force
That I, the one who leads men from their course,
Exert o'er man's desire to serve his world.
I proved my power in a storm unfurled
That wrecked a family's love through thoughtlessness
And left a widening gap—lost happiness.
Ah, perfect thoughtlessness, so well contrived,
Consummate plan, for which I love have strived.
See how the one seduced into my wicked way
Let loose a fiery temper to display
The shallowness that Conscience joys to hide.
Yet added to this evil, I'll confide
Another triumph. Duty lies undone—
Love's obligations left for selfish fun.
And yet my victories lie far beyond the home,
And men slight men beneath the very dome
Of heaven. Man stoops within to satisfy
His pride and flaunt himself before the eye
Of other men. And with malicious words
Man tramples reputations like the herds
Of fiery steeds would mar the valued toil
Of poor man's hands ravaging the soil.
I built a lure to lead man's steps astray.
I gave a chance to shut the light of day
Forever from his mind. The tempting bait
Which lured man in great numbers to my gate
Was trivia—a chance to fill his mind
With nothing great, to hide the worthy find
Of true benevolence from self and all
The greedy world, so large and yet so small.
Delighting in the darkness I can give
Man finds his joy, for man's afraid to live.
Behold the great and mighty Temptor's power.
Ah, man will kneel to me in life's last hour.

O Proud and Spiteful Temptor, who art not great,
 To whom the weak alone commit their fate,
 Admit your evil scheme for victory
 Will only gain endless futility.
 My power, the rule of justice, truth, and love
 Has gathered faithful men so far above
 The low and common scum who dwell with you
 That man will wish to serve and wish to do
 The good and loving acts that please the soul
 And make the withered heart grow whole.
 No lazy apathy controls these men,
 Yet zeal is turned to purpose, not to whim.
 The earth is man's to do with as he wills,
 To mould, to shape by time and chance and skills.
 If to withdraw and let the earth decay,
 Not adding, sharing, serving, is his way.
 Then he may live, I'll not condemn, yet then
 Man's destiny is death. But yet if men
 Will give the world a ray of hope or light
 They'll live forever—a beacon bright
 To men whose path is dark and way is steep.
 They'll live, while selfish others toss in sleep.
 Today, as in your power many fell,
 Men rose with me in happy heights to dwell,
 For in the home I've brought great happiness
 Through serving all in true unselfishness.
 Outside the love of home, men still find
 All is not strife when serving in the kind
 And selfless deeds they give the world their best.
 I see mankind delighting in the rest
 From seeking, searching for the blessed peace
 That comes when struggle for self-gain does cease,
 And men begin to live to make the earth
 A place of love and joy, a place of worth.

 I sense the tug of power, the zest for life
 In all its bitterness and hate and strife.
 There is some glory here, yet then I see
 The peace and joy of good. Which shall it be?

BEAUTY

Beauty is the rainbow flight
Of a humming bird;
Beauty is a green tree
Windy-stirred.

Beauty is a star, a cloud,
A yellow butterfly;
The pale pink east at early dawn;
The evening sky.

Beauty is the silver
Ribbon of a brook.
Oh! I see beauty
Every place I look.

THE SEA

I stood on the beach and looked at the sea;
It seemed to call and to beckon to me
To see its secrets hidden below
From ages so countless no man could know.

Each wave tumbled in, gave one joyous cry,
Then murmured a whisper and was ready to die.
Yes, a wave came in and beckoned to me,
Gave a hint of that story, the one of the sea.
